

Reindeer are herbivores. Herbivores are plant eaters. They eat grass, lichens, mushrooms, and leaves. Reindeer have a great sense of smell and are excellent swimmers! It helps them find food under the snow! Reindeer live and travel in groups called a herd.

Reindeer are mammals. Mammals are warm-blooded animals, they have hair or fur, and mothers produce milk to feed their babies. A male reindeer is called a buck, a female reindeer is a doe, and a baby reindeer is a fawn. When a fawn is born, it will weigh 10-11 pounds. It will nurse for about six months.

Reindeer grow to be about 4-5 feet tall not including their antlers. Their antlers are 5 feet tall. Reindeer are the only deer that both males and females grow antlers. Reindeer can weigh anywhere from 240-700 pounds. They have thick brown fur with patches of white on their bodies to help them keep warm in the cold weather. Their hooves help them dig through the snow to find food. The outer edges of their hooves are sharp and help them walk on ice and rocks. What did you learn about reindeer?

ALL ABOUT REINDEER

Reindeer are also known as caribou. They live in the northern parts of North America, Europe, Alaska, Russia, Canada, and Greenland. They live on tundras. A tundra, is in the Arctic region where it is very cold, and the land covers the snow.
